Languedoc's star still rising

LANGUEDOC remains a strong favourite among UK property investors – and for good reason.

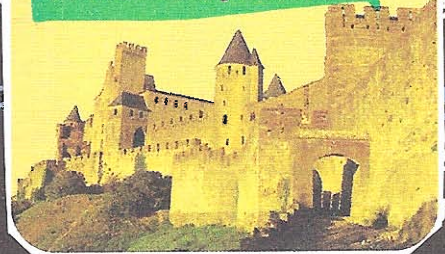

A recent Abbey National survey showed that Languedoc-Roussillon was the most popular area for UK overseas buyers with the majority intending to invest between £50,000 and £150,000 in their project.

The region has continued to buck the general French property price slow-down with consistent monthly price increases of over 10%, according to property specialist Creme de Languedoc.

As these increases are starting from a lower base than neighbouring Provence, investors can still pick up a great property for considerably less than a UK equivalent, says Creme de Languedoc.

Flybe gateway Avignon is in the heart of Languedoc, while the region is also easily reached from Perpignan and Chambéry.
